POETRY.

KINGS AND SEALS.
BY T. MOORE.

"Go!" said the angry, weeping maid,
"The charm is broken!—once betray'd,
Oh! never can my heart rely
On word or look, on oath or sigh.
Take back the gifts so sweetly given,
With promis'd faith and vows to Heaven;
That little ring, which night and morn,
With wedded truth my hand hath worn:
That seal, which oft in moments blest,
Thou hast upon my lips imprint,
And sworn its dewy spring should be
A fountain seal'd for only thee!
Take, take them back, the gift and vow,
All sullied, lost and hateful now!"

I took the ring—the seal I took,
While oh! her every tear and look,
Were such as angels look and shed,
When man is by the world mislead!
Gently I whisper'd, "Fanny, dear!
Not half thy lover's gifts are here:
Say, where are all the gifts he gave
To every ragglet's jettie wave,
And where is every one he printed
Upon that lip, so ruby-tinted,
Seals of the purest gem of bliss,
Oh! richer, softer, far than this!
And then the ring—my love! recall
How many rings, delicious all,
His arms around that neck has twisted,
Twining warmer far than this did!
Where are they all, so sweet so many?
Oh! dearest, give back all, if any!"

While thus I murmur'd, trembling too,
Lest all the nymph had vow'd was true,
I saw a smile relenting rise
'Mid the mist azure of her eyes,
Like day-light o'er a sea of blue,
While yet the air is dim with dew!
She let her cheek repose on mine,
She let my arms around her twine—
Oh! who could tell the bliss one feels
In thus exchanging rings and seals!

Advertisement for a WIFE.

Ladies, a Bachelor, wiser grown,
Is tired of living all alone,
And hopes to cheer his lonesome life,
By taking to himself—a WIFE.
In pity, then, to his condition,
Pray grant his humble, sad petition;
As yet, among the female race,
He has not had the least success:
All his exertions have been vain,
A Lady's fickle heart to gain;
And now, each baffled passion rising,
He tries his luck by advertising:
If this, some petty Girl should see,
Who thinks that she could fancy me,
Let her make answer quickly, for
I've liv'd too long a Bachelor,
And, Oh! when comes cold wintry weather,
How happy we shall live together!

HARRISBURG, Sept. 11.

ROBBERS AND MURDERERS.

We are indebted to the politeness of a friend for being able to publish the following information, received from a gentleman of respectability residing at Big Flat, in the state of New York. The letter from which we take our extracts, is dated September 1, 1824.

Last week, as one of the Tuscarora tribe of Indians, by the name of Douglass, who had been in Bath jail, for passing counterfeit money, and been bailed out, was passing a Mr. Ives, to whom he had passed the money; a fight ensued between them, when Douglass drew a dirk and stabbed Ives three times, so that he died in about ten minutes.—Douglass fled to the woods and immediate pursuit was made by the Sheriff and his posse. During the pursuit a cave was discovered, which contained two boxes, a bed, chairs—a trunk was also afterwards found, which contained silks, seven watches, and $52 dollars counterfeit money. The Sheriff, after this, proceeded to search the house of a man by the name of Mayberry, where he found fifty-one watches hid under a floor—a bloody shirt was found upon stairs, concealed among some dried pumpkins—two cravats were also found, concealed in an under-bed, one of which was cut in two or three places, but in such a manner, that when the cravat was folded up, it made but one cut. A silver watch was also found, marked with the same letters as the shirt and cravats. The day after this, the search being still continued, $1000 of good money was found concealed behind Mayberry's chimney, and subsequently another chest was discovered containing valuable silks and other goods, to the amount as is supposed, of six hundred dollars.

The following persons have been committed to jail. Mayberry's family, William B. Jones, Griff Jones, James Jones, a man by the name of Wallace, another by the name of Hathway, one by the name of Cole, and another by the name of Helmer Cole. Douglas had not been caught when the letter was written.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Steam Boat Election.—On Friday the steam boat from Norfolk to Baltimore, was freighted with a number of passengers from all parts of the union. By way of introduction to conversation perhaps, a proposal was made to elect a president of the United States, which was cheerfully agreed to; a president, secretary and tellers were appointed for the occasion, and scraps of paper distributed for the purpose of writing the ballots. The interest of the subject was quickly manifest in the parties. When prepared to ascertain the result, the first ballot drawn was for General Jackson; the person who voted it, related with the prospect of the success of his favourite, clapped his hands, walked exultingly, and offered round bets on the Hero of Orleans. The next ballot was for John Quincy Adams—the second, third, fourth, for the same. Jackson stuck fell as the ballots one after another were produced, down, down to the very bottom of the hat crown. When the votes were reported, it appeared that John Quincy Adams had obtained every vote except the one for the General. Such an accidental association of a number of persons on the great route from south to north, assembled from every point of the compass, and about in the waters of the 'old domain' itself, entire strangers to each other, and without an interchange of opinion upon the subject, to evince such a conclusive result in favor of this patriot and statesman for the presidency, is a testimony of no slight weight in the scale by which we are to judge of the sentiments of the people of the union.—Maryland Republican.

Selections from Lucretius, or many things in a few words, addressed to those who think.

What we conceive to be failings in others, are not unfrequently owing to some deficiencies in ourselves: thus plain men think handsome women want passion, and plain women think young men want politeness; dull writers think all readers devoid of taste; and dull readers think witty writers devoid of brilliance; old men can see nothing to admire in the present days; and yet former days were not better, but it is they themselves that have become worse.

In civil jurisprudence it too often happens that there is so much law that that there is no room for justice, and that the claimant expires of wrong, in the midst of right, as mariners die of thirst, in the midst of water.

As that gallant can best effect a pretended passion for one woman, who has no true love for another, so he that has no real esteem for any of the virtues, can best assume the appearance of them all.

No improvement that takes place in either of the sexes can possibly be confined to itself; each is an universal mirror to each; and the respective refinement of the one will always be in reciprocal proportion to the polish of the other.

Drunkenness is the vice of a good constitution or a bad memory; of a constitution so treacherously good that it never bends until it breaks; or of a memory that recollects the pleasures of getting drunk, but forgets the pains of getting sober.

Marriage is a feast where the grace is sometimes better than the dinner. If you cannot inspire a woman with love of you, fill her above the brim with love of herself;—all that runs over is yours.

When the affairs of a nation are ill conducted, and they suffer through the incapacity or the perverseness of those who have the care of government, private people are justified in stepping a little out of their private station. They enjoy a right of somewhat more dignity than that of idle lamentation over the public afflictions. They may look into them narrowly—act upon them freely. BURK.

"Alas! how little do we appreciate a mother's tenderness while living! How heedless are we in youth of all anxieties and kindness. But when she is dead and gone; when the cares and coldness of the world come withering to our hearts; when we find how hard it is to find true sympathy, how few will befriend us in our misfortunes; then it is that we think of the mother we have lost. It is true, I had always loved my mother, even in my most heedless days; but I felt how inconsiderate and ineffectual had been my love. My heart melted as I retraced the days of infancy, when I was led by a mother's hand, and rocked to sleep in a mother's arms, and was without care or sorrow. "Oh, my mother," exclaimed I, burying my face again in the grass of the grave—"Oh, that I were once more by your side, sleeping, never to wake again, on the cares and troubles of this world!" Irving.

Astonishing.—Education is strangely neglected in some parts of our country. If the sparseness of the population prevents the establishment of schools, surely parents might, without loosing any valuable time, teach their children to read and write.—We have just seen in a North-Carolina paper, a copy of the presentment of a Grand Jury of Edgecombe county, concerning a public nuisance, to which six out of the eighteen jurors signed their marks, instead of their proper names! The Foreman of this Jury was a gentleman, formerly a Representative in Congress, of uncommon literary acquirements. The advantages of education are at least unequally distributed there.—Nat. Int.

Good Humour.—Is the clear blue sky of the soul, on which every star of talent will shine more clearly, and the sun of genius encounter no vapours in his passage. 'Tis the most exquisite beauty of a fine face—a redeeming grace in a homely one. It is like the green in the landscape, harmonizing with every colour, mellowing the glories of the bright, and softening the hue of the dark; or like a flute, in a full concert of instruments, a sound, not at first discovered by the ear, yet filling up the breaks in the concord with its deep melody.

Marvelous.—The following "Snake story" is going the rounds, and notwithstanding its plausibility, the incredulous editor of the Boston Courier will doubtless disbelieve it:

A boy named Butler, in Ancaster at Mr Templeton's, had a jug of water at the well; a garter snake got into the jug unseen by the boy, who being thirsty took a hearty draught, and swallowed the reptile three feet long; it was alive in his belly for an hour after and observed to move; the boy continued to have fits for some time. Dr. Hamilton of Ancaster, was sent for and killed the snake by administering oil. The boy has since passed the snake in pieces.

Vituperation.—The following invective of one Fisher, was directed against no less a man than the celebrated Dr. John Owen, Dean of Christ Church:—"Thou fiery flogger, and green-headed trumpeter; thou hedgehog, and grinning dog; thou bastard, thatumbled out of the mouth of the Babylonish bard; thou tinker; thou lizard; thou bell of no rattle, but the tone of a kettle; thou wheelerbarrow; thou whirligig; O thou firebrand; thou adder, and scorpion; thou louse; thou crowding; thou moon-calf; thou ragged interdenation; thou Judas; thou lives in philosophy and logic, which are of the Devil!"—London paper.

Philadelphia Police.—Under the head of a review of the transactions of the Police for the last fortnight, the Democratic Press informs us that on the 14th ult. a gentleman of the Bar was fined one hundred dollars and costs for molesting and obstructing the Dog Catchers whilst in the discharge of their duty. Benjamin Oakford was fined 3 dollars and costs for riding immoderately through the streets. Fifty-two DOGS were taken up, killed and buried during the past week.

Aug. 21.—Thirty-seven different individuals supposed to have subjected themselves to fines during the week past, to answer for having had boxes, and barrels, lumber, marble, &c. on the footway. These cases will be heard in the course of this week. Fifty six DOGS were taken up, killed and buried during the present week, and two redeemed at 5 dollars each. The surveillance of the Philadelphia Police includes every thing—"from grave to gay, from lively to severe."

Boston, September 13.
The culprit Frisk, who, it will be recollected, was some years since acquitted of the murder of Williams, a fellow prisoner, in the State Prison, on the ground of insanity—and who since has killed two persons sleeping in the cell with him at his own request, has been very heavily fettered ever since his escape from the old jail and recaptured at Waltham. His fetters were of steel, case hardened. He was carried into an entirely new building, and yet he has contrived to conceal some implement, by which he can free himself from his shackles. A few days ago one of the links of the principal chain, was discovered to be severed, and the piece cut out was so ingeniously replaced by rivets, that it would not readily be detected by the naked eye. He could thus at pleasure relieve himself from the weight of his fetters. He appears now to be rational enough and converse without hesitation upon common subjects.

When Gen. LINCOLN went to make peace with the Creek Indians, one of the chiefs asked him to sit down on a log. He was then desired to move farther. The request was repeated till the General got to the end of the log. The Indian said, "Move farther;" to which the General replied, "I can move no farther." "Just so it is with us," said the chief; "you have moved us back to the water, and then ask us to move farther!"—Conn. Journal.

La Fayette Lamps.—Mr. Sanderson of Philadelphia, has invented a civic lamp, on an economical plan, for the purpose of illuminating the windows of houses, &c. It is said that one gallon of oil will supply two hundred of these lamps, and five dollars purchase a thousand of them.

THE WHIG

BRIDGETON.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1824.

In our next we shall commence publishing the communications handed us by a correspondent, respecting J. Q. ADAMS.

An extract of a letter from Mississippi, now before us, informs, that Mr. Adams is rapidly gaining ground in that state, that the methodists who are numerous, and the Baptists, are strong in his favour, and that some of the most influential men in the state, (whose names are given,) who had formerly supported Jackson, Crawford and Clay, are now strong and warm for Mr. Adams.—In Ohio, at county meetings of all parties, Mr. Adams has received nearly unanimous support.

The time has come when every man who feels an interest in the prosperity of his country is turning his thoughts to, and seeking information from, every source whence he can derive it, to aid him in making a choice for the chief magistracy. It is highly important he should do so, because the interests of future generations perhaps depend on it no less than the present.

The choice we have made is known to our readers; few of their wishes are communicated directly to us. We are aware, however, that we coincide with a very respectable and numerous portion of our fellow citizens, and we are pleased to know that our friends have been distinguished for moderation. If any subject should be discussed dispassionately, it is the presidential question. We have read of no people in any country or place whose conduct pleased us better than the Baptist Society at Saluda, in South Carolina.—They have established meetings, to pray that the Supreme Director would influence them to a wise and judicious — to the best, choice. This is exactly what all christians should do, because liberty is too precious a gift to be trifled with; it may easily be sacrificed to prejudice, partiality, or some fascinating illusion, and in the time of popular excitement the very best interests of the people may be lost sight of. Like the man who bought a horse for the sake of his tail, so it may be purchased — like the man who bartered his cow for a lottery ticket, that came out a blank, so it may be exchanged. No fine appearance or fair promise, should induce us to give away this political true riches.

Having ourselves a preference and a favourite, we wish, as all others do for their favourites, to defend him from malignity, and his character from obloquy, when unjustly assailed by either. Mr. Adams has lately been most unjustly abused by a posse of men in Washington, who, it would seem, are using every method to embarrass him, & every intrigue to injure his reputation: On a late occasion when an appeal was made to his benevolence, he stepped forward to assist a woman who was harassed by a heartless and unfeeling landlord. He consented to give a security note to Mr. Ker, in favor of Mrs Moulton, whom Ker had distrained for rent. By artifice, the amount distrained for (125 dollars,) as soon as Mr. Adams consented to assist the woman in distress, was raised in the note to $187 50.—The amount distrained for being only 125, and this being the sum represented to Mr. Adams for which his benevolent aid was needed, he readily assented. The additional sum was put to it, & a representation made to him (Adams) by Mr. Ker's friends, that the first statement was a mistake, after some explanations he endorsed the note. This signature he offered as security, as he had no interest in the transaction further than benevolence was concerned. It afterwards appeared that he was grossly imposed on, that the note was put into Bank, & no notification was given him of the time of payment until within a few minutes of the time of closing the Bank on the last day of grace, a time when he was involved in the midst of official business and could not attend to it. The note was protested. On this subject much abuse has been liberally poured on the Secretary. Gen. Van Ness, who is Martin Van Buren's full brother, at dabbling among petty malignities, and political intrigues, immediately on finding a little troubled water, he blew his breath on it, to make it turbid and stink in the nation's nose. Van Ness, however, is now so well known as a busy body—an interfering intermeddling fellow, that his character begins to assume a murky hue, and is on this account sinking as rapidly below his former respectability in public estimation as the sun at five o'clock in the afternoon about the equinox. In this whole transaction we see nothing which in our opinion does not reflect credit on the heart and feelings of Mr. Adams.—Had this transaction been done at any other time, under any other circumstances, or almost by any other person than Mr. Ker, Mr. Adams would have received the usual courtesy—and been treated as a gentleman, which we think he was not.

It is not in our power, this week, to furnish the particulars of La Fayette's progress through this state, and entry into Philadelphia. Next week we shall endeavour to give a summary of his proceedings, &c.

The following Tickets have been received, each with a request either written or verbal, to give it an insertion in the Whig. Our paper is open to all.

ANECDOTE OF LA FAYETTE.

At the siege of York Town, while the fleet of Count de Grasse was blockading the harbour to prevent supplies from reaching the British, the Count received positive orders from France to proceed to St. Domingo, at a certain date. General Washington, well knowing that upon the Count depended his chance of success, went personally on board the Ville de Paris, the flag ship of De Grasse, and endeavoured, by every means in his power: to delay his departure—but in vain; the Count showed his written orders, where it appeared that the time had already elapsed. General Rochambeau next went—but with no better success. In this dilemma, the youthful, the virtuous, the great La Fayette, determined to use his influence in behalf of his adopted country—"Remain, (said he,) and I will bear you safe to the King—remain; and I will bear the brunt of his displeasure." The Count, at last, consented—the enemy's fleet was kept out—the town surrendered—and liberty was proclaimed to distressed America.

Among the articles intended to decorate the table of refreshments at Castle Garden this evening, is a very large cake, in the form of a pyramid, bearing this inscription—"Ever welcome La Fayette. Presented to General La Fayette, by F. Ferry." Mr. F. is a confectioner at No. 84 Broadway, and has displayed great taste in his art. The cakes elegantly decorated, presenting at equal distances around the pyramid 13 likenesses of the General, with the words "Welcome La Fayette" around each. It is also ornamented with columns, stars and roses, and displays national standards on the top. The inscriptions are formed of sugar plums inserted in the cake. [Dat. Adv.]

While passing the scene of Arnold's treason, Gen. La Fayette related, very minutely all the circumstances connected with that affair. Washington with many other officers, arrived at Arnold's house, on the day of his escape. Intelligence of the arrest of Andre and the treason of Arnold, was communicated to Washington a few minutes before dinner. He mentioned it to La Fayette Hamilton & Knox only. At dinner it was observed that Gen. and Mrs. Arnold were both absent. After dinner the intelligence spread rapidly and a council of the General officers was called, at which Gen. Knox the junior Brigadier, was first asked by Washington what ought to be done.—Gen. Knox, with great gravity, replied "that something should be done to prevent the desertion of Major General."

The progress of La Fayette our country has inspired the people with an enthusiasm which has never been exceeded on any former occasion.—On his leaving New York for Albany, the delay occasioned by the postponement of the Castle Garden fete, is said to have produced many ludicrous circumstances. At Newburgh, the patience of the assembled multitude was worn out by the protracted delay of the General's appearance, and on the boats touching the wharf they rushed in mass to take possession of him bodily. Unluckily they happened to come in contact first with Col. Platt, a veteran officer of the revolution, who accompanied him, dressed for the occasion in an old regimental coat, which hung about him like a shirt, reaching to his shoes, and with buttons as big as saucers; him they immediately laid hold of, pulling and hauling by the sleeves, arms and elbows; in vain he exclaimed and bawled aloud "I am not the Marquis." They could not hear, they could only see his dress, and they took it for the dress of the old French court, nor was it till Fayette himself was able to make his way to them, after much difficulty, they were convinced of their error.

HATTERS.—The city of Philadelphia with a population of thirteen thousand taxables, contains 56 master hatters. The borough of Reading with not quite 1000 taxables, contains 66 master hatters, by whom about 300 persons are employed, as journeymen and apprentices.—Berks Jour.

On Thursday night last, five of the prisoners in the Richmond Penitentiary, escaped from that building, by sawing through the bars of their sleeping cells, and letting themselves down from the top of the wall by blankets.
