LETTER OF ADVICE.

Written from a Father to his only Daughter, immediately after her Marriage.

The following letter is handed to us, "from the pen of one of the best," and our correspondent believes in his conscience, "one of the greatest men that Virginia has produced." — It is written in an admirable manner, upon a most interesting subject—and is worthy of the high reputation which the author bears.—It forms an excellent supplement to the celebrated letters of Dr. Gregory to his daughters.

MY DEAR,—You have just entered into that state which is replete with happiness or misery. The issue depends upon that prudent, amiable, uniform conduct, which wisdom and virtue so strongly recommend on the one hand, or on that imprudence, which a want of reflection or passion may prompt, on the other. But as there is no wish nearer to my heart than that you may ensure all the happiness which the union of virtuous persons is capable of bestowing, and as the best sometimes err for the want of previous reflection upon that line of conduct which is invariably to be pursued, how early I render you a higher service than presenting you with that advice which the warmest affection suggests. My experience, as well as my solicitude, my fond hope of seeing you happy and beloved, even self interest, for your happiness must now constitute the principal source of that of your parents, all urge me to fulfil a duty at once pleasing, and I trust most useful.

You possess a good heart and a good understanding. You are allied to a man of honor, of talents, and of an open, generous disposition. You have, therefore, in your own power, all the essential ingredients of domestic happiness.—It cannot be married if you now reflect upon that system of conduct which you ought invariably to pursue; if you now see clearly the path from which you will resolve never to deviate.—Our conduct is often, the result of a whim or caprice, often such as will give us many a pang unless we see beforehand, what is always the most praise worthy, and the most essential to happiness. I will call your attention to a few primary rules of conduct, from which a virtuous wife, one who has the sense and the goodness, to endeavor to promote mutual happiness, & to render the matrimonial state a feast of the purest affection will never depart.

The first maxim, which you should impress most deeply upon your mind, is never to attempt to control your husband, by opposition, by displeasure or any other mark of anger. A man of sense, of prudence, of warm feelings, cannot and will not bear an opposition of any kind, which is attended with an angry look or expressions. The current in his affections is suddenly stopped; his attachment is weakened; he begins to feel a mortification the most pungent; he is belittled even in his own eyes; and be assured, the wife who once exercises those sentiments in the breast of her husband, will never regain the high ground which she might and ought to have retained. When he marries her, if he be a good man, he expects to find in her one who is not to control him, not to take from him the freedom of acting as his own judgment shall direct; but one who will place such confidence in him as to believe that his own prudence is his best guide. Little things, what in reality are mere trifles in themselves, often produce bickerings, and even quarrels. Never permit them to be a subject of dispute. Yield them with pleasure, with a smile of affection. Be assured, that one difference outweighs them all a thousand or ten thousand times. A difference, in reality, with your husband ought to be considered as the greatest calamity, as one that is to be most studiously guarded against; it is a demon, which must never be permitted to enter a habitation, where all should be peace, unimpaired confidence, and heartfelt affection. Besides, what can a woman gain by her opposition or her differences? Nothing.—But she loses every thing; she loses her husband's respect for her virtues; she loses his love, and with that all prospect of future happiness. She creates her own misery, and then utters idle and silly complaints, but utters them in vain. The love of a husband can be retained only by the high opinion which he entertains of his wife's goodness of heart, of her amiable disposition, of the sweetness of her temper, of her prudence, and of her devotion to him. Let nothing, upon any occasion, ever lessen that opinion. On the contrary it should augment every day; he should have much more reason to admire her for those excellent qualities which will cast a luster over a virtuous woman, when her personal attractions are no more.

Has your husband staid out longer than you expected? When he returns, receive him as the partner of your heart. Has he disappointed you in something you expected, whether of ornament, of furniture, or of any other conveyance? never evince discontent; receive his apology with cheerfulness. Does he, when you are house-keepers, invite company, without informing you of it, or bring home with him a friend; whatever may be your repast, however scanty it may be, however impossible it may be to add to it, receive them with a pleasing countenance, adorn your table with cheerfulness, give to your husband and to your company a hearty welcome; it will more than compensate for every other deficiency; it will evince love for your husband, good sense in yourself, and that politeness of manners which acts as the most powerful charm; it will give to the plainest fare a zest superior to all that luxury can boast. Never be disappointed upon any occasion of this nature. If apologies, as silly people often think, be necessary, your husband will make them for an ingenious wife will, with good humor, banter her husband for giving his friends so indifferent a repast.

In the next place, as your husband's success in his profession will depend upon his popularity, and as the manners of a wife have no little influence in extending or lessening the respect and esteem of others, for her husband, you should take care to be affable and polite to the poorest, as well as to the rich. A reserved haughtiness is the sure indication of a weak mind and an unfeeling heart.

With respect to your servants, teach them to respect and love you, whilst you expect from them a reasonable discharge of their respective duties. Never tease yourself and them by scolding; it has no other effect than to render them discontented and impertinent. Admonish them with a calm firmness, and if that mode will not produce the desired effect, let them be moderately punished.

Cultivate your mind by the perusal of those books, which instruct whilst they amuse. Do not devote much of your time to novels. There are a few which may be useful in improving and in giving a higher tone of our moral sensibility; but, in general, they tend to vitiate the taste, and to produce a disrelish for substantial food. Most plays are of the same cast; they are not friendly to that delicacy which is one of the ornaments of the female character. History, geography, poetry, moral essays, biography, travels, sermons, and other well written religious productions, will not fail to enlarge your understanding, to render you a more agreeable companion and to exalt your virtue. A woman devoid of rational ideas of religion, has no security for her virtue; it is sacrificed to her passions, whose voice, and not that of her God, is her only governing principle. Besides in those hours of calamity, to which families must be exposed, where will she find a support, if it be not in her just reflections upon that all ruling Providence, which governs the universe, whether animate or inanimate?

Mutual politeness between the most intimate friends is essential to that harmony, which should never be once broken, or interrupted. How important, then, is it between man and wife! The more warm the attachment, the less will either party bear to be slighted, or treated with the smallest degree of rudeness, or inattention. This politeness, then, if it be not itself a virtue, is at least the means of giving to real goodness a new lustre; it is the means of preventing discontents, and even quarrels; it is the oil of intercourse; it removes asperities, and gives to every thing smooth, an even and a pleasing movement.

I will only add, that matrimonial happiness does not depend upon wealth; no, it is not to be found in wealth, but in minds properly tempered and suited to our respective situations. Competency is necessary; all beyond that point is ideal. Do not suppose however, that I would not advise and stimulate, if requisite, your husband to augment his property by all honest and commendable means. I would wish to see him actively engaged in such a pursuit, because engagement, a sedulous employment in obtaining some laudable end, is essential to happiness.—In the attainment of a fortune by honorable means, and particularly by professional exertion, a man derives peculiar satisfaction in self applause, as well as from the increasing estimation in which he is held by those around him. such men always indicate cheerfulness, a fine flow of spirits, and consequently afford the best proof of their happiness, while the indolent, or those who spend more than they make, are as universally gloomy, discontented & peevish.

In the management of your domestic concerns, let prudence and wise economy always prevail. Let neatness, order, judgment, be seen in all your different apartments. Unite liberality with a just frugality; always reserve something for the hand of charity, and never let your door be closed to the voice of suffering humanity.—Your servants, in particular, will have the strongest claim upon your charity.—Let them be well fed, well clothed, nursed in sickness, and never unjustly treated.

I could easily write a volum upon this interesting subject, as the short letter which you now receive. But I am persuaded, it is of importance to lead you to "reflect in time upon the essential means of securing matrimonial happiness," than to enter into a more minute detail. Without such reflections, you would expect an effect, when the sufficient cause was removed, in short there are two or three ways of gaining wisdom. If we are to be taught by our own experience, the cost is often immense. If, by the experience of all those who have gone before us, the cost to us is nothing; we set out aright and the path we have entered upon, will every day become more pleasing.

That you may enjoy mutual happiness, is the fervent prayer of your affectionate father.

SUMMARY.

The fever at New Orleans is abating, pleasant weather is very moderate

The venerable Jefferson, on the 16th ult. while stepping from his own door, the step gave way, by which he was precipitated to the ground, and had his left arm broken. He is doing well.

A mine of coal, supposed to be inexhaustible, has been discovered by judge Pettibone, of St. Charles, Missouri.

The body of Methodists in Kentucky, have lately separated themselves from the Episcopal Methodists, and instituted a mode of church government of their own, which nearly resembles that of Presbyterians.

Dr. Adam Clarke, who was appointed by the British Methodist Conference, to write a memoir of the Wesley family, to correct the misrepresentations of Dr. Southy, in his life of that reformer, has accomplished the task imposed on him, and made a present of it to the conference.

The deaths of yellow fever at New Orleans on the 22d and 23d ult., were 16. It continues to rage, but has somewhat abated from its former virulence.

A legal question is now under discussion at New York, whether the tenants who were forced from their houses by the yellow fever, are bound to pay rent for their houses, during their absence.

The English admiralty report, that they have 600 ships of war, including 84 ships &c. now building in different dock-yards. Among these are 4 of 120 guns, 2 of 110, 1 of 86.4 of 84, 6 of 80, 10 of 74 and the remainder from 50

John W. Taylor is re-elected to congress from the state of New York.

The Trenton Federalist says, that it was the passing of the Eclipse thro' New Jersey, dressed up in Iris finery, on his way to Washington, that produced the racing fever afresh, in some of the citizens, from which arose the application to the legislature for an act to authorize horse racing; but the horsemen in the fervor of their zeal, bill,—and at the tail of their

Fire at Northampton.—On Wednesday last, the court-house in Northampton Mass. containing the register's, clerk's, sheriff's, and other offices, was destroyed by fire.—The building was of brick.—The common pleas was in session at the time.

Dr. Beaty a physician to Greenwicht hospital, Eng. is said to wear, mounted as a brooch, the ball which caused the death of Lord Nelson, in the battle of Trafalgar.

The bill to divide Sussex county, which passed the house of Assembly, was negatived in council.

The agricultural society of Virginia, propose to found a professorship in that state.

Nicholas Biddle, Esq. is nominated by the delegates from the different states who assembled in Philadelphia for that purpose, to be president of the Bank of the United States, in the place of Langdon Cheves, Esq. resigned. An English schoolmaster who has written a grammar, says that a repeating watch is of the feminine gender.

THE WHIG.

BRIDGETON,

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1822

In consequence of giving the conclusion of the legislative proceedings, many articles are unavoidably omitted.

On Friday the 29th ult. the legislature of this state adjourned, having passed 39 acts, a list of which will be given in our next.

The weather.—The fore part of the present week the weather was very severe; snow fell several inches deep. On Tuesday morning, (a gentleman informs us,) a crust of ice was formed across the creek, about a mile below the bridge, but gave way with the tide.

We have received a letter from our correspondent at Washington, but have only time to mention, that large quorums appeared in both houses on Monday; all the members from New Jersey were present.

The death of Mr. Dougherty having occasioned a vacancy in the Clerkship of the house, eighteen persons were nominated to fill it.

After balloting six times, the house adjourned without making a choice. On Tuesday, on the fifth ballot, (being the 11th in all,) MATTHEW S. CLARKE, of Chambersburg, Pa. had 93 votes, and was duly elected.

Mr. Clarke is a man apparently between 30 and 40 years of age, of a prepossessing appearance and address,—and said to be of unexceptionable moral character, and I think will make a good officer.

The Presidents message, was received, read, referred to a committee of the whole on the State of the Union, and 5000 copies [the usual number] ordered to be printed.

POETRY.

From the Fredonian.

Translation from a fragment of BION an ancient Grecian philosopher and poet.

My verses please—I thank you, friend,
That such as you my lines commend:
But is that all?—Mere empty fame
Is but the echo of a name.
To write, was my sad destiny,
The worst of trades, we all agree.
Why should I toil upon a page
That soon must vanish from the stage,
Lost in oblivion's dreary gloom,
The immensity of things to come!—
In that abyss to calm no part,
Is mine, indeed!—this beating heart
Must with the mass of atoms rest,
My fancy dead, my fires repress'd.

If God, or fate to man would give
In two succeeding states to live,
The first, in pain and sorrow pass'd,
In ease, content, and bliss, the last,
I then would rack my anxious brain
With study how that state to gain;
Each day, my toiling mind employ,
In hopes to share the promised joy.

But, since to all, impartial heaven
One fleeting life has only given,
'Twere madness, sure, that time to waste
In search of joys I ne'er can taste;
My little is enough for me,
Content with mediocrity:
It never sinks into the heart
How soon from hence we all must part.
What hope can bloom on life's last stage,
When every sense declines with age,
The eye be-dimm'd, the fancy dead,
The frost of sixty on my head,
What hope remains?—one debt I pay,
Then mingle with my native clay!

*The preceding lines, in the original, were written by Bion, a celebrated pagan philosopher of Smyrna, in the Lesser Asia, and commonly classed among the minor Greek Poets. He is very ancient, and not long after the time of Homer. From the few fragments of his writings that remain, it appears he believed that the soul and body died together.—Yet, it is remarkable, he here declares that if he could persuade himself, there was to be a future state of happiness, he should think no diligence or pains too much to be a taker of that eternal inheritance. What a lesson to the professors of christianity from the pen of a mere moralist, a child of nature, and heathenism!

A novel and atrocious character.—During the awful prevalence of the plague in the north east of Spain, in the autumn of 1821, a foreigner, who was variously said to be a Jew, a Turk, an Armenian and a renegade, but whose acknowledged vocation was that of a merchant, in which capacity he had amassed a large property, visited the devoted city of Barcelona. A letter from thence gives the following account of this singular atrocious character:—"This man, who from his long white beard might have been taken for a Patriarch had been an eye witness of all the plagues that had desolated, of late years, the Turkish empire. As soon as he heard that a pestilence had broken out in any city, he immediately hastened to it. He used to account for these extraordinary journeys, by the advantage he found in such desolated countries in purchasing his goods at a lower rate than usual; but still it seemed inexplicable how lost of gold should so far overcome the love of life, and how the old man, who was already so rich, should continually expose himself to almost inevitable death. Questions put to this traveller were never answered clearly. When he arrived at such a theatre of death he wrapped himself from head to foot in coarse linen, covered his hands with black leather gloves, his face with a glass mask, and thus guarded against infection, and provided with a stick, which had an iron hook at the end, he entered the infected houses; there he possessed himself of whatever he found, seized on hidden treasures and the most valuable utensils, and tore their jewels from the bodies of the dead. More than once he is said to have hastened the effects of the pestilence, and to have given the death blow to the victims whose cries would have interrupted him in perpetrating his robberies. If chance led him into a house which was still free from contagion, he announced himself as a physician, and went to those who confided in his skill. Loaded with treasures he always returned to Venice, where, admired by every body, on account of the success of his enterprise, he waited for the signal for fresh booty, like the carrion vulture.

"The news of the distress of Barcelona became glad tidings for this wretch, and he had already carried on his horrid trade among us for a fortnight, when he was detected in the very act of stabbing a patient who was quite delirious. This patient was a young French merchant, who was greatly beloved at Barcelona on account of his integrity. He had just lost his wife and two sons, and was himself struggling against the disease, which had hitherto spared this courageous young man, who most tenderly devoted himself to his family. He was murdered almost in the arms of his countryman, Capt. R. who was near his friend in an adjoining room. Hearing the door opened, he hastened back to the patient; sees the villain stab his friend to the heart, rushes on him, seizes him, and throws him on the ground after a hard struggle, in which the old wretch showed much more strength than could have been expected. "Sir," cried the wretch, finding himself overpowered, "surely you will not kill me?" "Villain what hast thou done?" "But he was so ill!" "And those things which you had already stolen!" "I thought every body was dead; give me my life, I will make you a rich man." "You dare to offer me your blood-stained gold?" "Sir, be without fear; I possess several remedies against the plague; I will give you as many sequins as you can carry." "And were you to offer me two arrobas?"—"You shall have ten," said the murderer, and received the captain's sword through his heart. "The magistrates seized the body of the pretended Israelite, and had it hung at the corner of Regomiu-street. They also sent officers to the house in which he had lived, and ordered all they found there to be sold, for the benefit of the poor."

AFFECTIONATE ANECDOTE.
At the anniversary meeting of the Southampton Auxiliary Bible Society, on Thursday, the Rev. Legh Richmond related to the meeting the following anecdote:—By a sudden burst of water into one of the Newcastle Collieries, 35 men and 41 lads were driven into a distant part of the pit, from which there was no possibility of return, until the water should have been drawn off. While this was being effected, though all possible means were used, the whole number gradually died, from starvation or from suffocation. When the bodies were drawn up from the pit, seven of the youths were discovered in a cavern separate from the rest. Among these was one of peculiarly moral and religious habits, whose daily reading of the sacred Scriptures to his widowed mother, when he came up from his labor, had formed the solace of his lonely condition. After his funeral a sympathizing of the neglected poor went to visit her; and while the mother showed him, as a relic of her son, his Bible, worn and soiled with constant perusal, he happened to cast his eyes on a candle-box, with which, as a wick, he had been furnished, and which had been brought up from the pit with him; and there he discovered the following affecting record of the filial affection and steadfast piety of the youth. In the darkness of the suffocating pit, with a bit of pointed iron, he had engraved on the box his last message to his mother, in these words:—"Fear not, my dear mother; for we were singing and praising God, while we had time. Mother follow God more than ever I did—Joseph, be a good lad to God and mother. Mr. Richmond produced the box, which he had borrowed of the widow, under a solemn promise of returning a relic so precious to a mother's heart.

The editor of the Connecticut Journal, offers fifty dollars for the best paper on duelling, founded upon certain recent facts. This offer is authorized by a few gentlemen who have associated themselves for the purpose of discouraging duelling.

The steam boat Heckla from New Orleans for St. Louis, burst her boiler near Point Chico, on Friday the 27th of September, by which two men were killed, and several seriously scalded. In addition to this the yellow fever had broken out on board, by which the captain, mate, pilot, steward and seven others (five of whom were passengers,) had died, and many remained sick.

A Deer was killed in Woodford, on the 7th instant by Capt. Stephen Pratt, of this town, (Bennington) which weighed 209lbs. when dressed.

The Vermont penitentiary has, during the last twenty-two months, yielded a nett gain to the state, of $545 92.

Mr. Nathan Fletcher, of Bradford, made on Saturday last, working about 24 hours, twelve cider barrels.

In the year 1776 a Bill was introduced into the British House of Commons, for the better watching of the Metropolis, in order to effect which object one of the clauses went to propose that watchmen should be compelled to sleep by day. Lord Nugent, with admirable humor, got up, and desired that he might be personally included in the provisions of the Bill, being frequently so tormented with the gout as to be unable to sleep by day or by night.

Thrasylus the cynic, begged a groat from Alexander—"That sum," said the Prince, "is too little for a King to give."—"Then, give me a talent," said the philosopher—"That sum," said the Prince, "is too much for a cynic to receive."

Franklin.—It is rather a curious incident that when the Americans sent Dr. Franklin, a printer, as Minister to France, the Court of Versailles sent M. Gerard, a bookbinder, as Minister to Congress. When Dr. Franklin was told of it, "Well," said he, "I'll print the Independence of America, and M. Girard will bind it.

PROPOSE TO PUBLISH, BY SUBSCRIPTION,—

BROOKES'S

General Gazetteer Improved,

Or, a new and compendious

Geographical Dictionary;

Containing a description of the Empires, Kingdoms, states, provinces, cities, towns, forts, seas, harbors, rivers, lakes, mountains, capes, &c. in the

KNOWN WORLD:

With the government, customs, manners, and religion of the inhabitants; the extent, boundaries and natural productions of each country; the trade, manufactures and curiosities of the cities and towns; their longitude, latitude, bearings and distances, in English miles, from remarkable places; and the various events by which they have been distinguished:

INCLUDING
The Constitution of the United States, the ordinance of 1787, and the Constitutions of the respective States;

Together with a succinct account of at least fifteen hundred cities, towns and villages in America, more than have appeared in any foreign edition of the same work; in which the numerous mistakes & deficiencies of European Gazetteers, respecting this country, are corrected and supplied.

Illustrated by a neat colored Map of the United States.

ORIGINALLY WRITTEN

By B. Brookes, M. D.

The fourth American, from the London edition of 1819, with additions and improvements

BY WILLIAM DRRBY,

Member of the New-York Historical Society, Author of a Map and Statistical Account of Louisiana; Emigrant's Guide; and a Tour from New-York to Detroit.

IN order to render this edition in a peculiar manner valuable to an American reader, the publishers have employed William Darby of this city as editor, to collect and insert the names of such remarkable places on this continent, adjacent islands and elsewhere, as have not hitherto found a place in any gazetteer extant; to remedy such articles as are erroneously or defectively stated, in the original work; and in fine, as far as practicable, to comprise all the places worthy of notice in the world.

So many changes have taken place in Europe in the course of the last 8 or 10 years, as to render necessary a careful digest of the present limits of most states in that quarter of the world.

It must be obvious that in an age of active enterprise, discoveries, improvements and changes in objects of Geographical Science will be so rapid, and increasing in their operations, as in a few years, to render defective or obsolete any System of Geography, however perfect they may be at the time of publication. It must also be more than apparent that the correctness of these observations apply with particular force to America; in one section of which, a widely extended population is daily developing, as objects of geographical and historical record, names of places, very imperfectly or entirely unknown to science, previous to the occurrence of the events which have given them a title to literary attention: and in another quarter, the energies of a free and enterprising people are effecting revolutions on the face of nature, with a celerity and an extent which has no parallel in the progress of human affairs.

The publication of the work has hitherto been delayed in order to procure the census of 1820, which has not yet been completed. The publishers however confidently hope to receive the necessary document, and present the work to their patrons, in the course of the ensuing season, in a form worth their acceptance: but the Gazetteer will not be put to press before the returns of the census are obtained, collated, and the various articles digested according to its results.

The Post Office list will be carefully arranged up to the present time, and the mark P. O. placed before the description of all places containing a Post Office.

No comment can be necessary to elucidate the advantages which must be comprised in a portable volume, in which will be concentrated the proposed improvements and additions.

TERMS.

The work to be comprised in one octavo volume of about 900 pages, printed on good paper, and to be illustrated by a new and neat colored Map of the United States, projected and engraved for the express purpose, to contain the political subdivisions, made up to the period of publication.

Price, neatly bound, Three Dollars and 50 Cents, payable on delivery.

VALUABLE MILL

FOR SALE.

Will be sold at private sale, a very valuable

Mill for Grinding Grain.

It is situated on the head waters of Cedar Creek, in the town of Cedarville; it is in complete repair, with two pair of stones and in the midst of a grain country where there is no situation for a rival establishment, the demand for work is always as much as can be met; and from the increase of agricultural industry and improvement, there must be an increased demand upon the establishment which will warrant any enlargement. Attached to the establishment, is a house one and a half stories high with a lot of ground, blacksmiths' shops, and a lot of meadow adjoining, which will be disposed of with the above. Many other advantages might be enumerated, which may be known by those wishing to purchase: for further particulars, enquire of the subscribers.
